Opening Reception: Sunday, June 8, 2008 2–5pm

“Weaving a World” tells the story of the people who worked in Lewiston’s textile mills, their families, and the community they made. Drawing on oral-history memories as well as documentary research, the exhibit traces the millworker experience from the hard times of immigration and the Great Depression through the prosperity of the 1950s to the decline of the mills. An exhibit created through a partnership between Museum L-A and Bates College.
